

WHAT WE DO

We are known as a pipeline construction company, but we are much more than this.

We also build large and small facilities that service the energy industry, like compressor stations, generation stations, tie-in stations, and more. We have a team that is dedicated to constructing low-carbon energy infrastructure projects, including building pipelines for carbon capture and facilities projects for hydrogen energy.

We are small enough to be nimble and responsive, and large enough to have technically skilled experts leading our teams and working on substantial, complex infrastructure projects across western Canada.

What makes us different is our willingness to collaborate and deliver best value. By best value, we don't mean cheap and fast, we mean quality for the cost, guaranteeing assured delivery in a safe and collaborative manner.

We value the communities in which we work and have robust engagement and investment programs at the project and organizational levels.

OUR PAST FUELS OUR FUTURE:

We are the product of two leading infrastructure companies, Canada's Surerus Pipeline Inc. and the UK's Murphy Group. We combine over 100 years of pipeline, infrastructure, low-carbon energy and construction knowledge on complex, often remote, and technically challenging projects.

The marriage of these two companies to form Surerus Murphy provides us access to globally sourced and highly skilled knowledge, the latest innovation and advancements in technologies, merged with and a track record of successful engineering applications.

Both parent organizations began as family companies with strong values anchored in hard work, delivering quality customer service, and providing a caring corporate culture. We formed in the shadows of these values, holding on tight to their roots, and this has shaped how we do business.

We get repeat business from our clients because of how we treat them and our communities, as well as the quality of our product delivery. We work collaboratively, safely, with integrity and transparency to deliver good work, and as we do this, we are conscious to remember that we are always ambassadors for clients, guests of the communities we are in, and representatives of the industries for which we build.
